

SEMINAR ON HUMAN RELATIONS

at

The Pennsylvania State College

State College, Pennsylvania

October 7 – 10, 1951

Sponsored by

The United Steelworkers of America and

The Pennsylvania State College

FOREWORD

The challenging feature of our meeting together stems from three compelling assumptions on which this seminar is based.

First is the conviction that human relations should be a subject of enormous and common concern. Second is the hope that something can be done about their improvement. And third is the responsibility we all share for transmitting our concern to other people and for applying our concern to the job of everyday living.

A case for the importance of human relations today can be constructed from two kinds of considerations. One is the fact that good human relations are indispensable for the operation of our highly interdependent society. The other is the fact that both between and within nations, the conscience of mankind is everywhere stirring people to look beyond the accidents of race, national origin, and sectarianism, to the common humanity of us all.

A solid case can also be made for the improvability of human relations. Human beings obviously have a great capacity to hate, but they also have an equal—perhaps greater capacity to love, and there is nothing in the scheme of things that places the forces of affirmation inevitably at the mercy of the forces of destruction. Moreover, there is nothing in the nature of man that compels him to hate other people because they are different in color, speak a different language, or follow a different creed. In other words, prejudices arising from racial, national, and religious differences are not inherited and can be changed.

But after we have increased our concern for the grievous state of human relations and have announced our faith that their improvement is possible, we are still confronted with the responsibility of getting on with the job which the problem of human relations presents.

There is much cause for hope because the relentless necessities of interdependence and our common sense of guilt may drive us into some acceptance of human differences earlier than we have anticipated. But formidable obstacles block the way to the consummation of this hope. In fact, the same forces which are the source of hope may, when intolerably frustrated, bring mankind to the valley of destruction.

No one knows how much time we have, but it can't be long. It would be fatal to assume that somehow we will muddle through our inhumanities into some benevolent form of ultimate accommodation. Fate will not be so kind. On the contrary, it must be the responsibility of free men of good will to work increasingly for satisfying relations among people everywhere.

It would not be extravagant to hope that the experience and example of this seminar will contribute materially to that goal.

DR. MILTON S. EISENHOWER

President

The Pennsylvania State College

Born in 1899 in Abilene, Kansas, where he attended high school and was graduated from Kansas State College, Dr. Eisenhower began his career teaching journalism at Kansas State. An interest in foreign affairs had prompted him to take a foreign service examination, and when offered the position of vice consul at Edinburgh, Scotland, at the age of 24, he accepted.

After two years he became an assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture; in 1928 he was named director of information of the U. S. Department of Agriculture; and in 1938 he was appointed co-ordinator of Land Use Programs, a new staff division in the Department.

In 1942 President Roosevelt named Dr. Eisenhower director of the War Relocation Authority to move some 120,000 Japanese-Americans from military areas, particularly on the Pacific Coast. When this assignment was completed, President Roosevelt appointed him associate director of the Office of War Information, an assignment that took him to North Africa to study refugee relief and relocation problems in Algeria and Morocco, and to establish the organization for psychological warfare against the Italians.

Dr. Eisenhower became president of Kansas State College during the summer of 1943, but continued his efforts for a program of world peace. Although he declined the offer to become assistant secretary general of the United Nations in 1946, he became chairman of the U. S. National Commission to UNESCO that year, participating in the first meetings in Paris. He was elected to the executive board of UNESCO in 1947. He attended the second conference of UNESCO in 1947 at Mexico City, the third conference in Beirut, Lebanon, in 1948, and the fourth conference in Paris in 1949.

He was one of three members named by President Truman in 1945 to a fact-finding board in the critical General Motors labor-management dispute. In 1946 President Truman appointed him to the Famine Emergency Committee to make more food available to the starving people abroad.

In that same year the President appointed Dr. Eisenhower to his Commission of Higher Education to study the overburdened college system and to find out how it can best accomplish the job.

Other assignments include member of Committee on International Policy of the National Planning Association; trustee of the National Committee for Economic Development; member of the Housing and Construction Committee of the American Council on Education; chairman of the executive committee of the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities; chairman of the 1950 general awards jury of Freedom Foundation, Inc.; director of Encyclopaedia Britannica Films, Inc.; director of Quaker Oats Co.

He holds membership in the Kansas Academy of Science, Phi Kappa Phi (scholastic), Sigma Delta Chi (journalism), Rotary, Sigma Alpha Epsilon (social).

PHILIP MURRAY

President
United Steelworkers of America

PHILIP MURRAY

President

United Steelworkers of America

Born in 1886 at Lanarkshire, Scotland, where he first worked in the coal mines, Philip Murray came to the U. S. in 1902 with his parents and nine brothers and sisters.

He began work in a coal mine near Pittsburgh, and undertook an 18-month course in mathematics from International Correspondence School—a course he completed in six months. He then studied in the fields of mining, labor relations and economics.

The turning point in his life came soon afterwards while working at a coal and coke company in Westmoreland County. He had complained to the checkweighman about having his coal shortweighed every day, a practice that cut down a miner's income. Words led to a fist fight, and Mr. Murray was discharged by the company for fighting on company property.

To his surprise, the entire 600 miners in the town walked out in his fight for an honest checkweighman. When hunger ended the strike after four weeks, Mr. Murray was escorted out of town by deputy sheriffs, and advised not to return. It was then that he decided what his life's work was to be.

In 1912 he was elected a member of the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers, and also turned down a high-salaried job with a coal company. He was elected international vice-president of the UMW in 1920, a position he held until his "break" with John L. Lewis in 1942. He was elected president of the CIO in 1940, and president of the United Steelworkers in 1942.

Mr. Murray drafted the original Davis-Kelly Coal Bill in 1930, the forerunner of the NIRA coal code and the Guffey Coal Bill. He assumed chairmanship of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in 1936, and since then the Union has signed contracts with 2000 steel manufacturing, fabricating, and processing firms.

He served on scores of boards and agencies during World War II, and was one of the labor leaders who went to President Roosevelt, following Pearl Harbor, to pledge a no-strike policy for the duration of the war. For his war activities he was awarded the Medal of Merit.

He was a member of the Pittsburgh Board of Education for 25 years, and has received many honors, yet has refused all political appointments except in the case of national emergency, such as the depression and the wars when both President Wilson and President Roosevelt appointed him to important boards.

He has received the Honorary Doctor of Social Science degree from Duquesne University; Honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Howard University; and the Monsignor Ryan Award for Racial and Minority Amity from the Committee of Catholics for Human Rights.

H. Y. McCLUSKY
President
Adult Education Association of the United States

Born in 1900 near Utica, N. Y., Professor McClusky was reared in the Midwest where he was graduated from Park College with the B.A. degree in 1921, and received the Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago in 1929.

He has been a member of the University of Michigan faculty since completing his graduate studies at Chicago, and at present is professor of educational psychology and chairman of the Department of Adult Education.

He has also taught at Chicago and Northwestern University during summers or leaves-of-absence, and has studied at the University of London. Dr. McClusky has served as associate director of the American Youth Commission of the American Council on Education; chief of the Division on National Organizations of the Office of Civil Defense; and consultant to the Office of War Information.

He has also served on the Research Committee of the Commission on Community Inter-relationships of the American Jewish Congress, and was recently elected the first president of the new national organization, the Adult Education Association of the United States. He is also a member of Governor Williams (Michigan) Commission on Displaced Persons, and of the Michigan Committee on Civil Rights.

He holds membership in the American Psychological Association; National Society for the Study of Education; American Educational Research Association; National Society of College Teachers of Education; National Education Association; Phi Beta Kappa; and numerous honorary societies.

Dr. McClusky is the author (with R. Schorling) of "Education and Social Trends." Throughout his life he has been deeply interested in and has worked in behalf of the many phases of human relations.

ROBERT A. LUKE

Secretary of Adult Education Service
National Education Association

Robert A. Luke, assistant director of the Division of Adult Education Services of the NEA, began his services in that capacity in March 1949. Before joining the National Education Association, he was executive secretary of the Adult Education Council of Metropolitan Cincinnati.

With professional training in the field of librarianship, teaching experience, and responsibility for community organization programs in Colorado, Nebraska, and Illinois, Mr. Luke has a broad background of leadership in many forms of adult education activity.

Since joining the NEA, Mr. Luke has served on the staff of the National Training Laboratory in Group Development and has had major responsibility for the development of central clearing house and information services to adult educators in local public school programs. He is associate secretary of the Department of Adult Education, a professional membership program, and associate editor of the Adult Education Bulletin.

An Indianian by birth, he received most of his formal schooling in Colorado. He received his A.B. from the University of Denver in 1937, and a Bachelor of Library Science degree from the same institution in 1949.

Mr. Luke is a member of Phi Delta Kappa, Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Gamma Mu, and the NEA. He has contributed to the major professional periodicals in adult education and library science.

EDWIN E. WITTE

Chairman, Department of Economics
University of Wisconsin

A native of Wisconsin, Professor Witte received the B.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Wisconsin in 1909 and 1927 respectively.

He became a parttime lecturer in economics in 1920, and professor of economics in 1933, at Wisconsin. He served as chairman of the department from 1936 to 1941, and was renamed in 1946.

He has been visiting professor in summer sessions to the Universities of Washington, California (Berkeley), California (Los Angeles), Hawaii, and at Harvard University.

He was secretary of the Industrial Commission of Wisconsin (1917-22); chief, Wisconsin Legislative Reference Library (1922-33); executive director, The President's Committee on Economic Security (which drafted the social security act—1934-35); member, Wisconsin Labor Relations Board (1937-39); chairman, Detroit Regional War Labor Board (1943-44); public member, National War Labor Board (1944-45); member, Atomic Energy Labor Relations Panel since 1948.

Among his writings are, "The Government in Labor Disputes"; "History of Labor Arbitration in the U. S."; and more than 50 articles on many aspects of labor relations for scientific and popular magazines.

DAVID J. McDONALD
International Secretary-Treasurer
United Steelworkers of America

The International Secretary-Treasurer of the United Steelworkers of America, David J. McDonald, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, began his career in the labor movement as secretary to the vice president of the United Mine Workers of America in September 1923. Mr. McDonald, prior to then, had worked for six years in the steel mills in Pittsburgh.

In the early days of his association with the United Mine Workers, that organization went through a struggle for its existence, and he served with the international officers in various important conferences and in the conduct of the ensuing nation-wide coal strikes. He assisted in the reorganizing of the coal miners union in 1933, and served as assistant secretary of several Appalachian coal conferences. His experiences included a six-month sojourn as assistant to Philip Murray when he was a member of the Board of the National Recovery Administration.

Shortly after its organization, the CIO decided to organize the steel industry of the United States and Canada, and on June 11, 1936, Mr. McDonald was named Secretary-Treasurer of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, later the United Steelworkers of America. He was elected International Secretary-Treasurer of the United Steelworkers of America in May 1942.

His activities in the Steelworkers' Union are in the fields of administration, organizing and collective bargaining. He holds many other positions in the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Among these are: secretary-treasurer of the CIO Political Action Committee; secretary of the CIO Southern Organizing Committee; member of the General Council of the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, and also member of the General Council of the Western Hemisphere division of that same organization. As a member of the International and Latin American Affairs Committee of the CIO, he has been required to attend innumerable conferences in Europe and Latin America, and consequently has been in the forefront in the fight against world communism in the ranks of labor.

Mr. McDonald is active in various charitable and civic movements on both the national and city scenes. He is an officer or committee member in such diverse organizations as the American Arbitration Association; Community Chests and Councils; American Heart Association; American Cancer Society; National Conference of Christians and Jews, etc.

E. E. Moore
Vice President
United States Steel Company

Mr. Moore was born in Indianapolis and his early life was spent in the Hoosier State. He set aside his studies at Indiana University in 1916 to join other students of that school in Infantry service on the Mexican border. He and his buddies concluded that in the next war it would be better to ride than walk and, accordingly, their National Guard Company was reorganized in 1918 into a Field Artillery unit and was immediately inducted into Federal service for overseas duty as a unit of the Rainbow Division.

Mr. Moore was captain in the 150th Field Artillery and remained in the Expeditionary Forces for 19 months. In the Army of Occupation, Mr. Moore served as Civil Court Judge and Civil Administrator of Neuenahr, Germany, and eleven surrounding villages.

Returning to the United States in 1919, he tossed a coin to determine whether he should cast his lot with the steel industry or with the oil industry. Ten days following his discharge from the service he secured employment as a construction machinist at the Gary Mills of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company. In 1920 he became foreman of the machine shop at the Gary Mills and three years later was transferred to the Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, offices on special work in connection with the mechanization of tinning practices.

Thirteen years after he began his industrial career with the United States Steel Corporation, Mr. Moore became assistant to the operating vice president of the Illinois Steel Company. When, in 1935, the plants of this concern became a part of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, Mr. Moore was appointed general superintendent of its South Works in Chicago. He became general superintendent of Gary Steel Works three years later and, in December of 1940, was appointed to his present position as vice president of industrial relations with offices in Pittsburgh.

Beyond his sphere of business, Mr. Moore is an active member of many community and professional organizations.

REV. JOHN LAFARGE, S.J.

Editor, America

The Reverend John LaFarge was born in 1880, the son of the widely known painter and author, great grandson of Commodore Perry, and a lineal descendant of Benjamin Franklin.

After receiving the A.B. degree at Harvard in 1901, he studied for the priesthood at the University of Innsbruck, Austria. In 1905 he entered the Maryland-New York Province of the Society of Jesus at Poughkeepsie. He later taught at Buffalo and Baltimore. He took graduate work at Woodstock College, Maryland, and was hospital and prison chaplain for a year on Welfare Island, New York City.

He became a member of the staff of America (national Catholic weekly) in 1926, executive editor in 1942, and editor-in-chief in 1944.

He is the author of "The Jesuits in Modern Times," "Interracial Justice," "The Race Question and the Negro," and "No Postponement."

The Reverend LaFarge was one of the originators of the Liturgical Arts Society in New York City, and its chaplain since its founding. He is a charter member and a former director of the National Catholic Rural Life Conference; an official of the Catholic Association for International Peace, American Catholic Historical Association, St. Angar's Scandinavian Catholic League, Committee for African Students in North America, Conference on Science, Philosophy and Religion; chaplain and a founder of the Catholic Interracial Council of New York City.

He received special encouragement from the late Pope Pius XI for his efforts in behalf of racial harmony in the U. S. While on a tour of Europe following World War II he had a private audience with Pope Pius XII who also encouraged him in his efforts in behalf of racial harmony. He just recently returned from a seven-weeks cultural mission in Germany under the auspices of the U. S. State Department.

REV. LILBURN B. MOSELEY

First Baptist Church
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

A native of Alabama, Dr. Moseley received the B. A. degree in 1926 at Wake Forest College, and the Master of Theology degree in 1929 at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

His first pastorate was at Emerson Avenue Baptist Church, Indianapolis, Ind., from 1929 to 1932. From 1932 to 1944 he was pastor of the First Baptist Church, Madison, Wisconsin, and from 1944 to the present at the First Baptist Church, Pittsburgh, Pa. While in Madison he did graduate work in sociology at the University of Wisconsin.

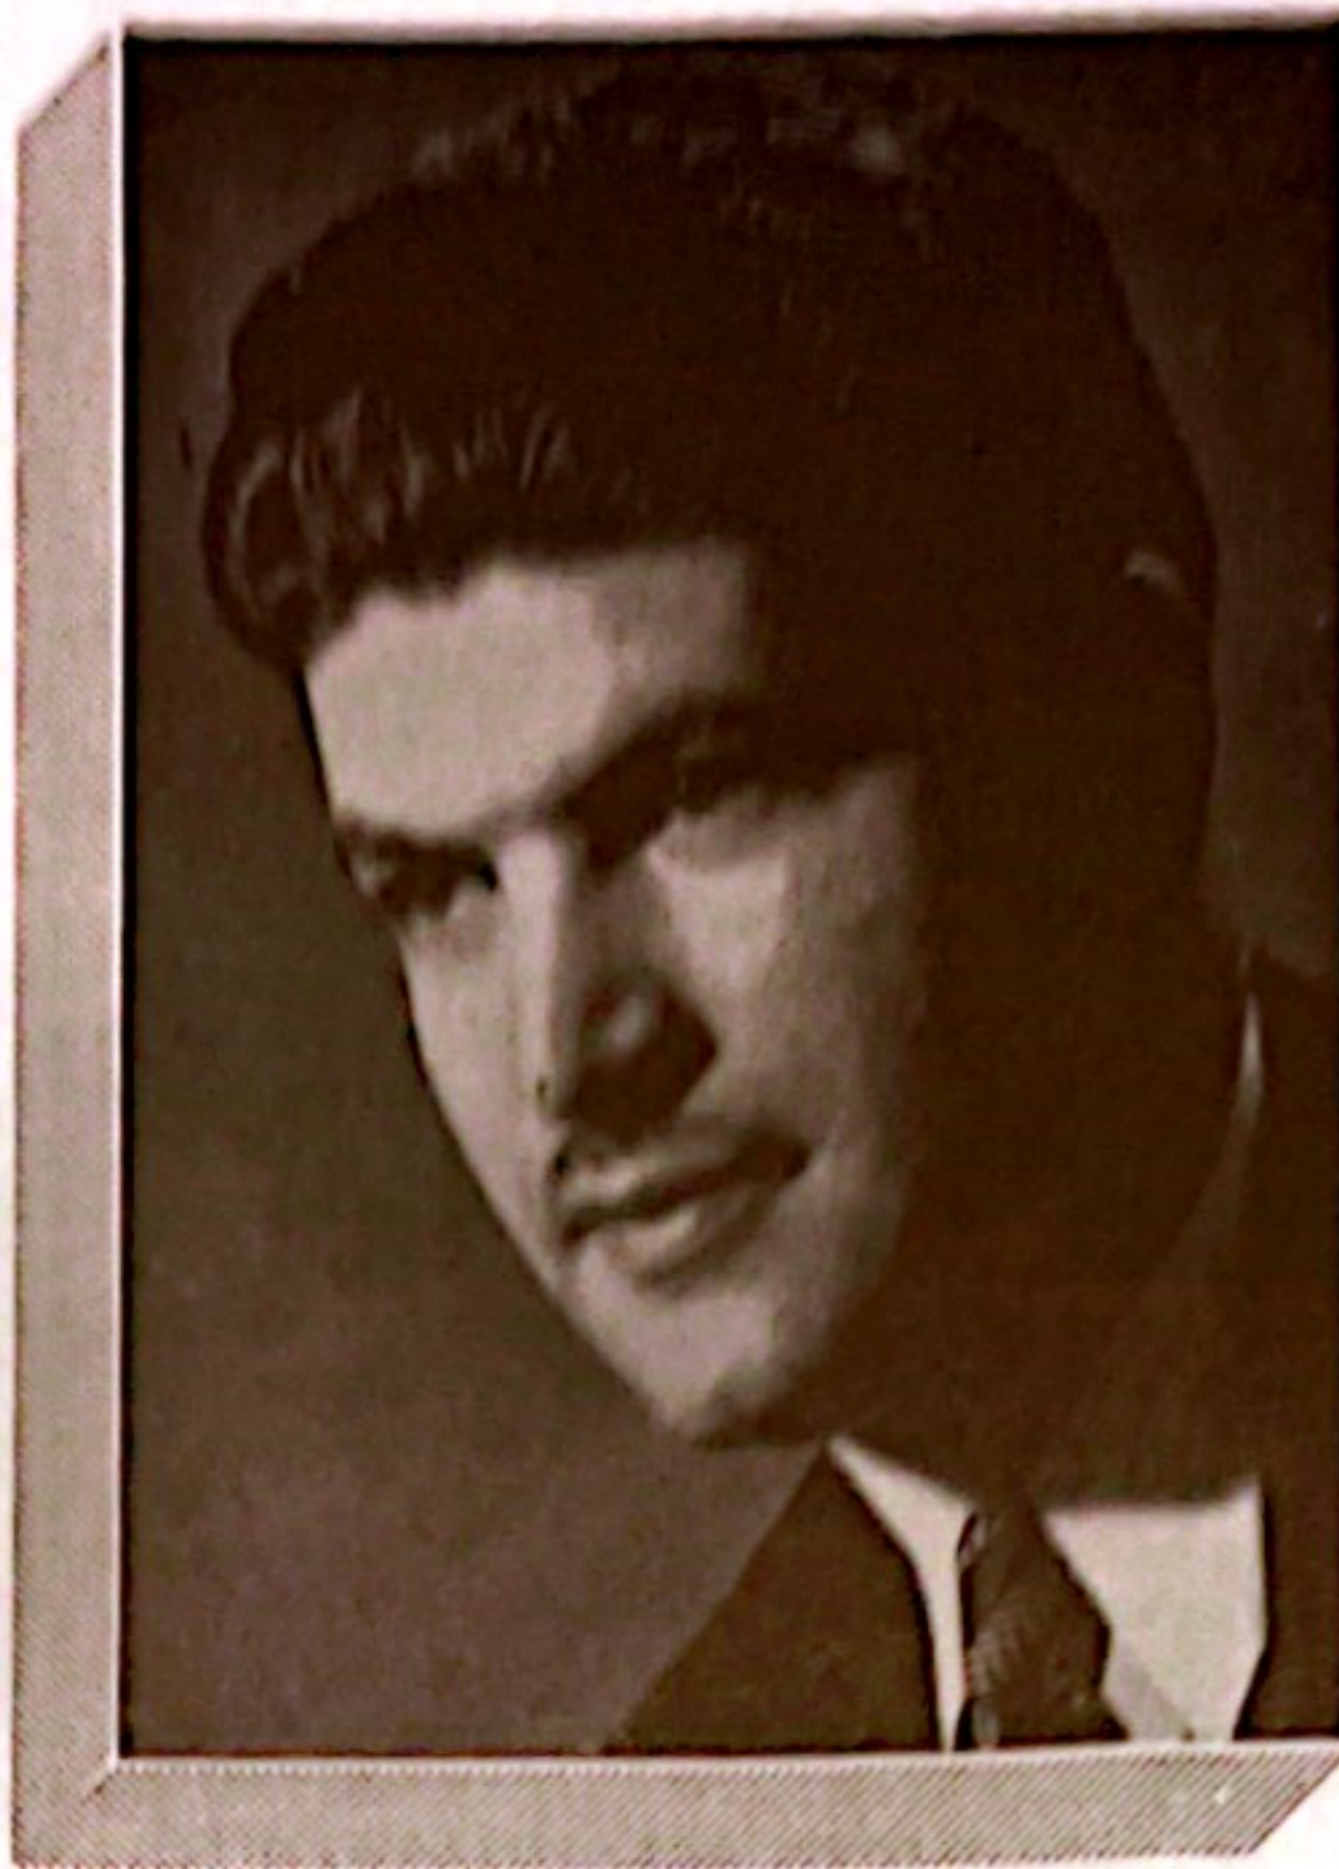

The Doctor of Divinity degree was conferred upon him by Franklin College in 1948, and by Bucknell University in 1949.

He has been a speaker at The University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Tech, Pennsylvania College for Women, Wake Forest, Denison University, University of West Virginia, Penn State, Kalamazoo College, Juniata College, Cornell College, Bucknell, and at numerous state teachers colleges in Pennsylvania and in other states.

He holds membership in the Wider Quaker Fellowship, Department of Church and Economic Life of the National Council of the Churches of Christ of America, Council on Christial Social Progress of the American Baptist Convention, Alpha Kappa Delta (sociology); 32nd Degree Mason, president of the Health and Welfare Federation of Alleghany County; director of Family and Children's Service of Pittsburgh; past-member, board of directors of the Urban League of Pittsburgh, and the executive committee of the Pittsburgh Round Table of Christian and Jews.

RABBI MORRIS N. KERTZER

*Director, Interreligious Activities Dept.
American Jewish Committee*

Morris N. Kertzer, was born in 1910 in the "bush country" of northern Ontario, where his father had pioneered. A log cabin in Cochrane on what was then "the last mile of steel" was his first home.

A graduate of the University of Toronto, he was ordained at the Jewish Theological Seminary and did graduate work at Columbia, Illinois, and Michigan. After several years with the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation, he became an associate professor at the School of Religion of the University of Iowa. He has lectured extensively in the field of interfaith problems and religious education.

Rabbi Kertzer traveled in Europe, Asia, and Africa both before and during the war. He was in Palestine at the time of the Arab riots in 1936 and again at the close of the war.

He was the only Jewish chaplain to serve on the Anzio beachhead and the first to enter Rome. After the invasion of Europe, he covered all of southern and central France. His "meritorious achievement" brought him the Bronze Star Medal.

From September, 1946 to May, 1949, he was Associate Rabbi of the Park Avenue Synagogue, in New York City.

He is author of "With an H on my Dog Tag" a book portraying the role of the Jewish soldier in the liberation of European Jewry.

Rabbi Kertzer is now Director of Interreligious Activities Department of the American Jewish Committee.

He is President of the National Association of Jewish Chaplains in the Armed Forces; Chairman of the Social Action Committee of the Synagogue Council of America, and Vice-Chairman of the New York Groups of the Religious Education Association.

GEORGE P. MURDOCK

Professor of Anthropology
Yale University

George Peter Murdock was born in Meriden, Connecticut, in 1897 and received his education at Yale College (A.B. 1915), Harvard Law School, and the Yale Graduate School (Ph.D. 1925).

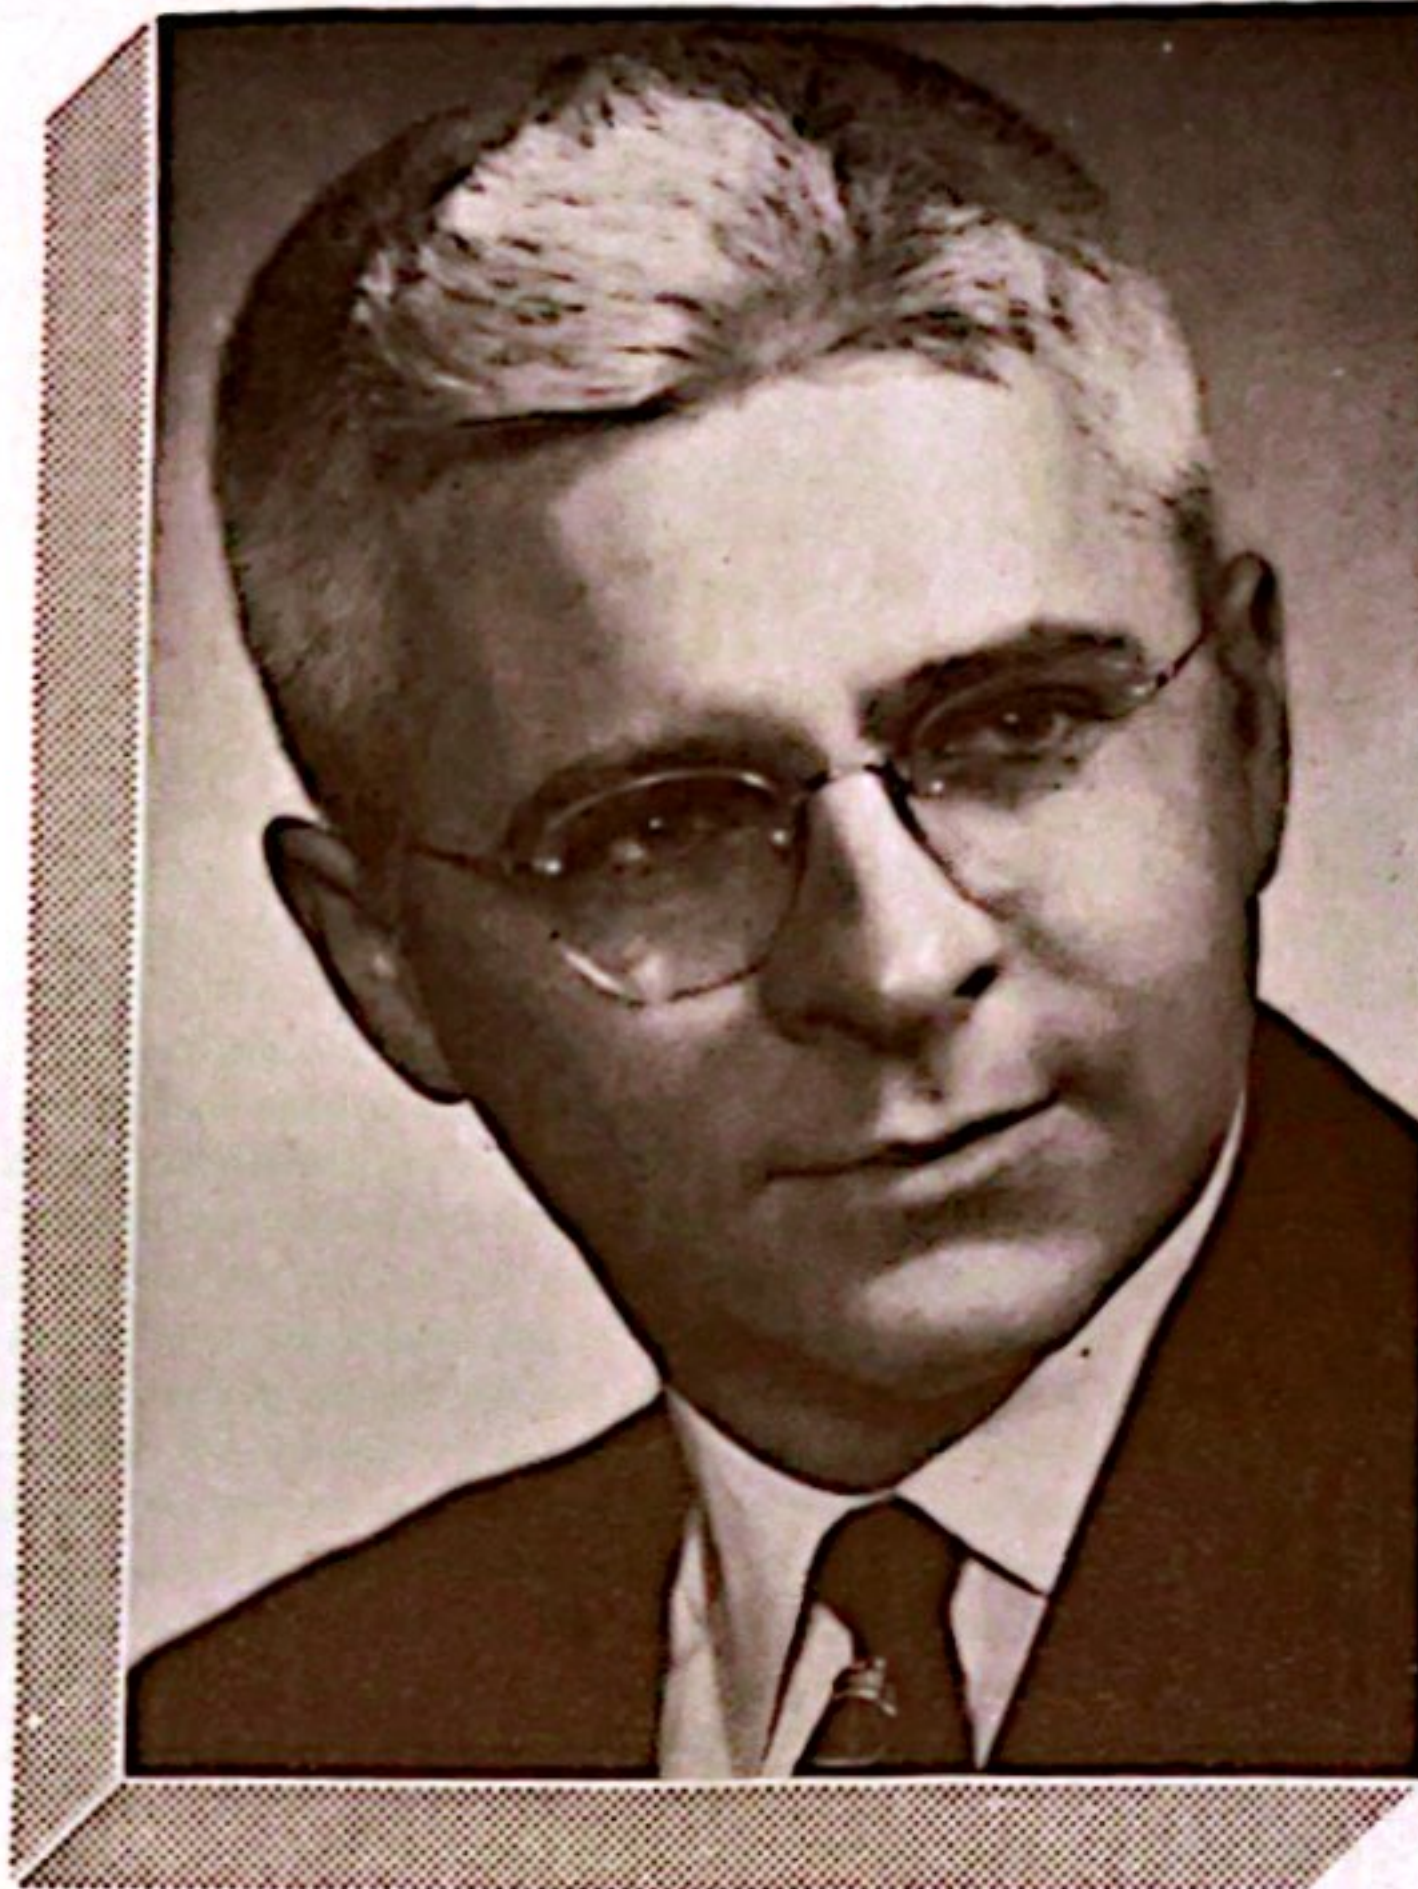

He taught at the University of Maryland from 1925 to 1927, and has been on the faculty at Yale since 1928. He has done anthropological field work among the Haida Indians of British Columbia, the Tenine Indians of Oregon, and the natives of Truk in the Central Pacific.

His publications include "Our Primitive Contemporaries," and "Social Structure."

Professor Murdock has been president of the Society of Applied Anthropology and vice-president of the American Anthropological Association, and in 1950 received the Viking Fund medal, award in general anthropology.

He served as a second lieutenant of field artillery in World War I, and as a commander in the USNR in World War II. He has traveled extensively in Europe, Asia, Africa, and Oceania.

Curator, Section of Man
The Carnegie Museum

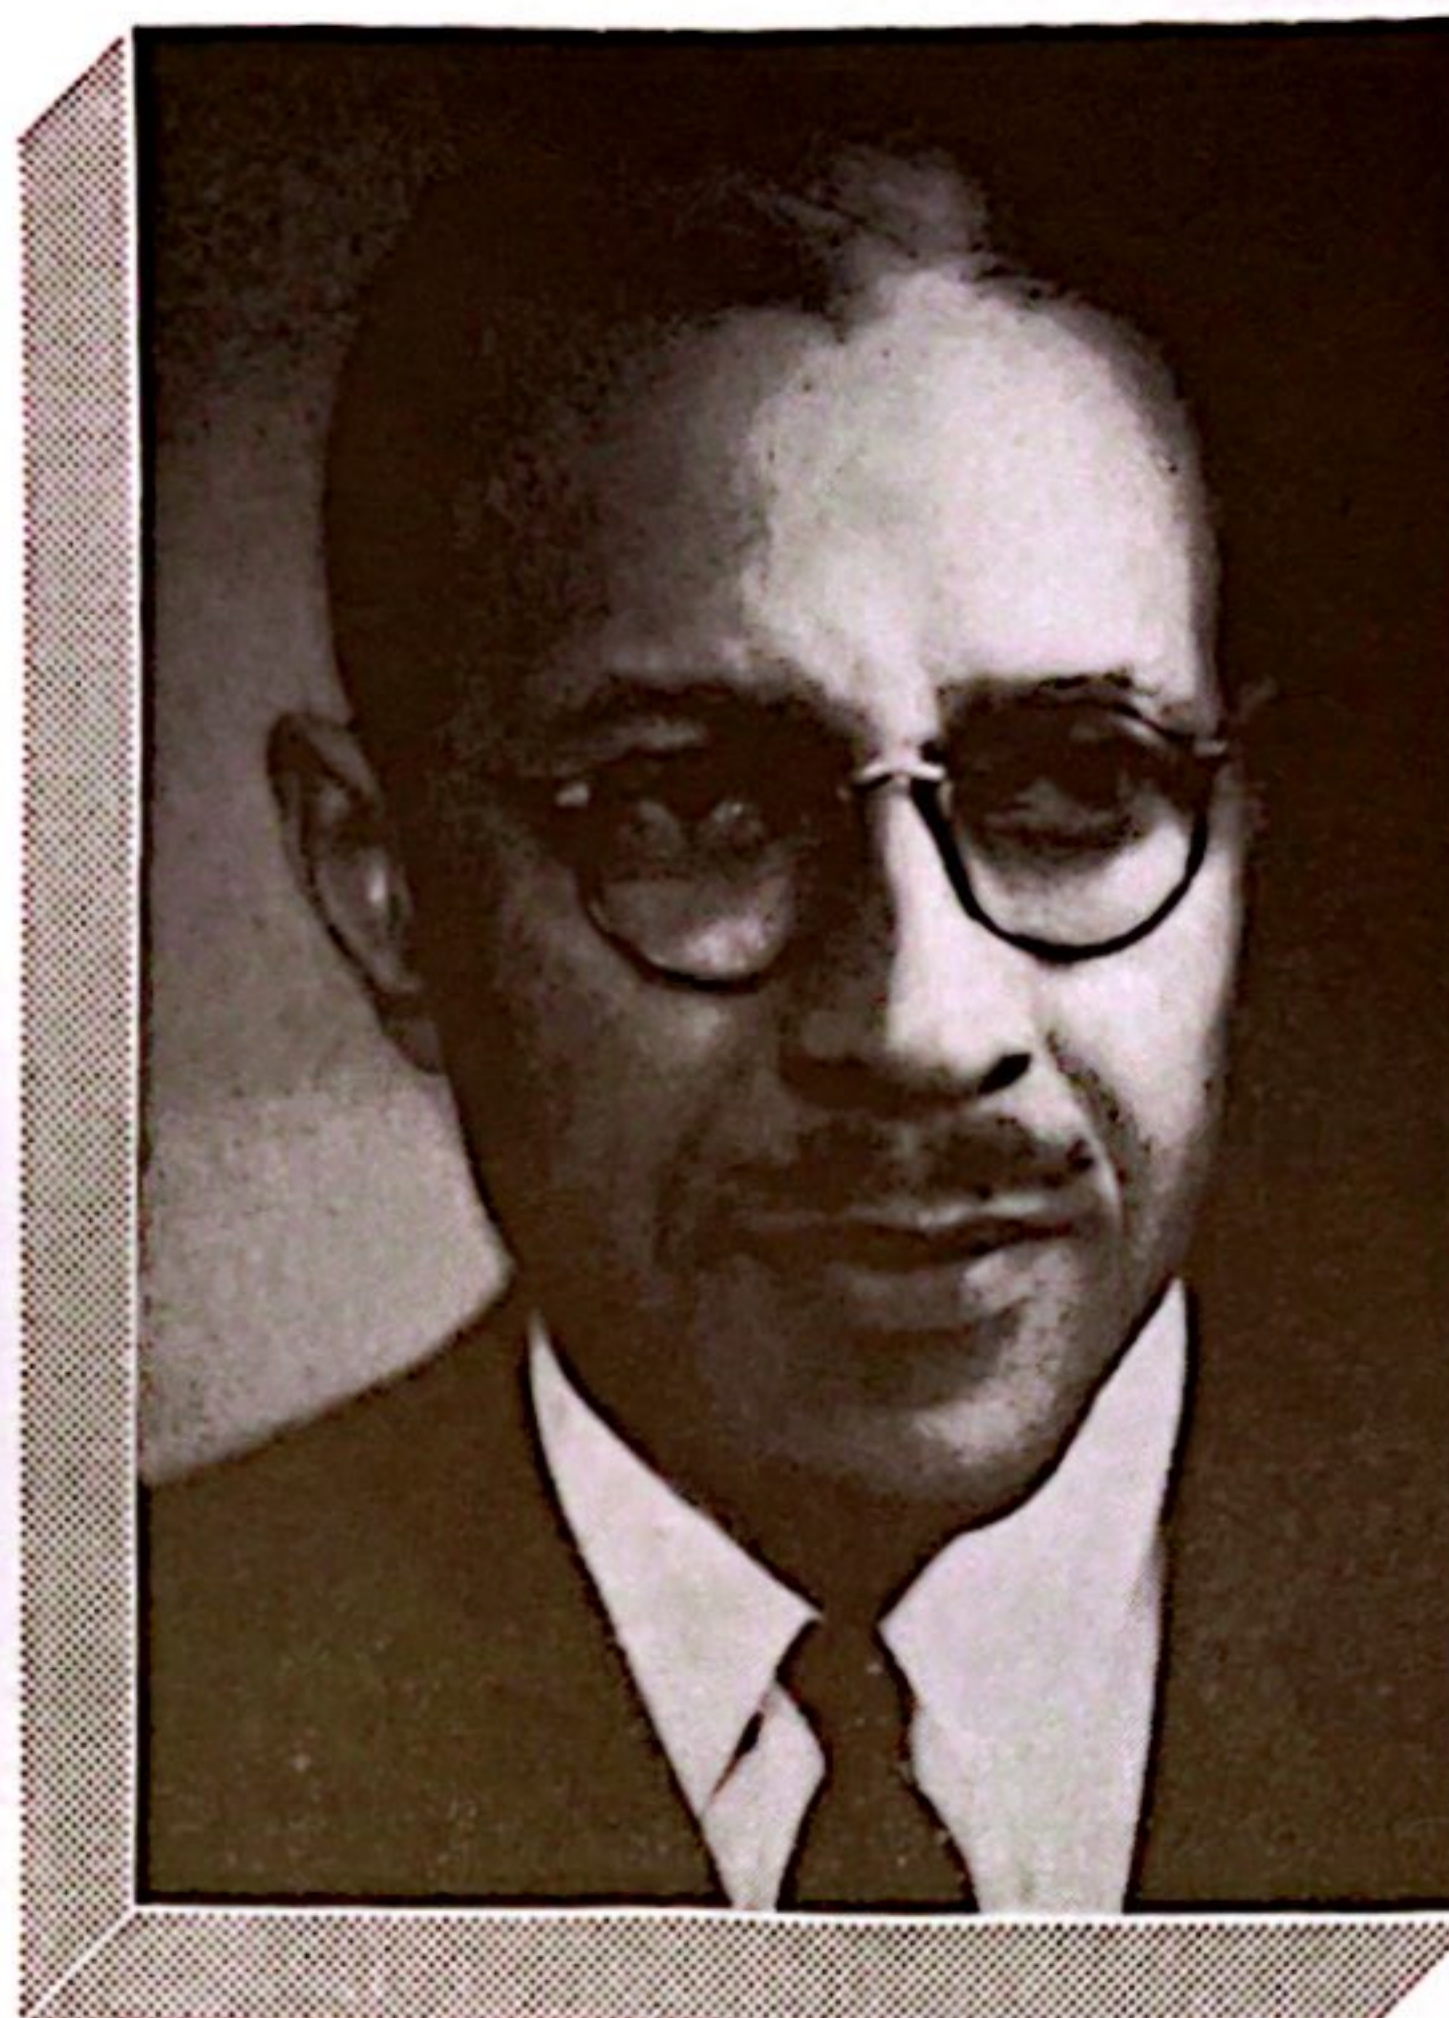

Mr. Swauger was born in 1913 at West Newton, Pennsylvania, where he attended the public schools. He began attending the University of Pittsburgh in 1930, eventually completing his work for a B.S. in Biology in 1941.

He began graduate work immediately, but entered the armed forces in 1942, rising from a private to a captain, and serving with the 3rd and 7th Armies in the European Theatre. He holds his commission in the Officers Reserve Corps at present. He completed work for his M.Litt. degree in 1947, and has been studying towards his doctorate since that time.

He first became associated with The Carnegie Museum in 1935, and was appointed to his present position following the close of the war. His field work has taken him into Ohio, New York, West Virginia, Maryland, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, and to Arabia. All of his field work has combined archeology and biology, except the Arabian venture.

CHARLES S. JOHNSON

President
Fisk University

The son of a Baptist minister, Dr. Johnson was born in 1893 in Virginia. He attended Wayland Academy, Virginia Union University, and the University of Chicago where he did graduate work in the field of sociology.

Upon becoming director of research for the National Urban League in 1921 he founded the League's periodical, Opportunity, a journal of Negro life, which he edited until 1929. He became head of the Department of Social Sciences at Fisk University in 1928, remaining in that post until he became president of Fisk in 1946.

His services to mankind comprise an almost endless list of special assignments and activities. Following are a few: Secretary of the Commission on Negro Housing for President Hoover's Conference on Home Building and Home Ownership; member of President Roosevelt's Committee on Farm Tenancy; member of White House Conference on Children in a Democracy; member of White House Conference on Children in Tennessee; member for the public on the Wage and Hours Committee of the Department of Labor for the Railroad, Cigarette and Tobacco industries.

MADAME
VIJAYA LAKSHMI PANDIT
Ambassador from India

Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit presented her credentials to President Truman as Indian's Ambassador in Washington on May 12, 1949.

Sister of India's Prime Minister Nehru, Madame Pandit has had an eventful life.

Born in 1900, she was educated entirely at home by private tutors. In 1921 she married the late R. S. Pandit. She has three daughters, Chandralakha, Nayantara, and Rita. The first two are graduates of Wellesley College.

Madame Pandit was elected to the Municipal Board of Allahabad in 1935 and served as Chairman of the Education Committee for two years. In 1937 she was elected to the United Provinces Legislative Assembly and appointed Minister in the Cabinet with the portfolios of Local Government and Health. She was the first woman Provincial Minister and served in this capacity for two terms.

In 1945 she led the Indian Delegation to the Pacific Relations Conference and later presented India's case unofficially at the San Francisco Conference. In 1946 she was appointed Leader of the official India Delegation to the United Nations Assembly at Lake Success and won a spectacular victory for India on the question of racial discrimination in South Africa. She led the India Delegation to the United Nations again in 1947 and 1948. She is the only woman thus far to have led a delegation to the United Nations. In August 1947 she was appointed Ambassador to Moscow, and was the first woman to be so appointed.

Madame Pandit has been closely associated with the All India Women's Conference, and was elected President in 1941. During the Bengal famine she founded the All India Save the Children Association, and was its President until her appointment to the U.S.S.R.

Madame Pandit has served three terms of imprisonment in connection with Mahatma Gandhi's civil disobedience campaigns in 1932, 1939, and 1942.
